2. INVESTMENT INDICATORS

Global

Widespread Growth of FDI Reported For 2006

Global foreign direct investment (FDI) inflows amounted to $1,306 trillion in 2006, rising more than 38% over the previous year, according to the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD). In its annual world investment report, UNCTAD said the growth of FDI in 2006 was the largest since 2000 and occurred in all three groups of economies: developed countries, developing countries and the transition economies of South-East Europe and the Commonwealth of Independent States (CIS).

According to the report, the stock of FDI worldwide reached $12 trillion in 2006. The rise in global FDI inflows reflected strong economic performance in many parts of the world and was partly driven by increasing corporate profits worldwide. While FDI inflows in developed countries rose by 45% to reach $857 billion, flows to developing countries and the transition economies attained their highest levels ever: $379 billion (a 21% increase over 2005) and $69 billion (a 68% increase), respectively.

The United States regained its position as the leading host country for FDI, with inflows of $175 billion in 2006. Britain and France followed the United States with $140 billion and $81 billion respectively.

Among developing and transition economies, almost all regions and subregions enjoyed healthy growth in FDI flows in 2006. The largest inflows to developing economies were to China, with $69 billion. Among transition economies, the largest inflows were to the Russian Federation, with $29.

Developed-country TNCs remained the leading sources of FDI, accounting for 84% of 2006 global outflows. While there was a rebound of FDI from the United States, almost half the world's outflows originated in European Union (EU) countries, notably France, Spain and the United Kingdom in that order. TNCs from developing and transition economies continued their international expansions in 2006, led by Hong Kong among developing economies and the Russian Federation among transition economies. Total FDI outflows from these two groups reached $193 billion, or 16% of world FDI outflows.

FDI outflows from developed countries grew by 45% to $1 trillion. The United States and five EU countries ranked among 10 largest outward investor economies in the world. France remained the second largest investor worldwide for the second year in a row ($115 billion)

At a somewhat slower rate than in 2006, FDI is expected to grow in 2007 and beyond. This forecast was confirmed by a rise in global cross-border M&As to $581 billion in the first half of 2007 - a 58% increase over the corresponding period of 2006 - and by the results of various surveys, including UNCTAD's new World Investment Prospects Survey. Nevertheless, FDI prospects may be affected by current uncertainties in the financial markets and unfavorable measures and movements for FDI in some areas.
