AMERICAN AIRLINES ANNOUNCES FURTHER EXPANSION OF SERVICES BETWEEN EUROPE AND NEW YORK JFK

American Airlines continues to grow its services between Europe and New York with the announcement today that it will begin two new routes early next year from Milan, Italy, and Barcelona, Spain, to New York International Airport (JFK), as well as adding a second daily roundtrip between London's Stansted Airport and JFK.

Beginning May 2, 2008, American will begin flying daily non-stop services from both Milan and Barcelona to New York JFK. American will also launch a second daily flight from London Stansted Airport to JFK commencing April 8, 2008. American's initial new service between Stansted and JFK begins on October 29, 2007.

American will fly all three new routes with two-class (Business and Economy) Boeing 767-300 aircraft with 221 seats, including 30 Next Generation Business Class seats. Designed to give passengers more comfort, flexibility and privacy, American's new Business Class features innovative, fully motorized lie-flat seats in a 2-2-2 configuration, a personal in-flight entertainment device with audio and video on demand, state-of-the-art cabin lighting, and sleek, ergonomically-designed overhead bins.

At New York JFK, passengers can conveniently connect to around 40 destinations across the Americas and the Caribbean served by American. The airline's new $1.3 billion terminal JFK, features a new U.S. Customs and Immigration facility which can handle 1,600 customers per hour, and a new 11,200 square foot Admirals Club and international First Class Flagship Lounge in the international concourse all designed to provide features that make international travel more pleasant.

"These new routes further demonstrate American's commitment to New York as an important international gateway," said Craig Kreeger, American's Senior Vice President – International. "These new services will greatly benefit customers throughout Europe wishing to travel to New York or to the many destinations across the Americas and Caribbean that we serve from our new JFK terminal."

American already operates transatlantic services to New York JFK from London Heathrow, Paris Charles de Gaulle, Brussels, Rome and Zurich.
