AMERICAN AIRLINES PUTS SELECT CENTRAL AND SOUTH AMERICAN DESTINATIONS ON SALE FOR TRAVEL THROUGH MID-MAY

Extensive Network, Plus Great Fares and Amenities Mean Unmatched Value

FORT WORTH, Texas – Here's a noteworthy item from the Department of Interesting Facts: No U.S. airline flies to more destinations (25) in Central and South America than American Airlines. Now, here's something really eye-catching: American has put many of those destinations on sale.

American Airlines, a founding member of the global oneworld[®] Alliance, is having a sale for travel through mid-May between the continental United States and select destinations in Central and South America.

If you've been considering a trip to tropical, inviting Central America (think: beautiful beaches, lush rainforests, captivating culture) or perhaps a visit to vibrant, diverse South America (spectacular sights, nightlife and shopping), then now is the perfect time to contact convenient, affordable American Airlines. Our frequent flights and fabulous fares can help you realize that vacation dream of a lifetime, or perhaps send you on that long-overdue visit with family and friends.

It's a fact: American Airlines + low fares = you in Central or South America this winter and spring. Here are the highlights of American's sale:

- Sale fares available between the continental United States and select destinations in Central and South America.
- Begin travel now through May 18, 2008; complete travel no later than May 20, 2008. Embargo dates apply for travel to/from Brazil.
- Purchase tickets no later than Feb. 12, 2008.
- Other restrictions apply. For rules and restrictions, see the terms and conditions below, or visit American's Web site, AA.com.
